

A FLOCK OF HAWKS

Chas. N. Gould, 1916.

(Abstract)

On October 4, 1916, when riding on the interurban from Oklahoma City to El Reno about two miles west of Banner, the writer saw a flock of between 100 and 150 marsh hawks in an alfalfa field. He had frequently seen small flocks of half a dozen or more circling in the air, but never before any considerable number of hawks on the ground.
